

BOLSHEVISTS EFFORT TO GET INTO UNION LABOR MEET FAILED

Chicago Meeting Resulted in Followers of "Isms" Being Bodily Ejected.

LEVEL HEADS REIGN

Radicals Were Shown There is No Room for Them in American Labor.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—About 50 of the noisiest and most radical of the 1,500 delegates to the National Labor Congress for the liberation of Thos. J. Mooney were booted out of the North Side Turner Hall yesterday by the majority moderates.

It took hours of violent debate and tremendous confusion, but resulted at last in a vote that no delegates be admitted except those specifically invited by the Mooney International Defense League.

And that dropped from the list the fifty Bolsheviks, I. W. W. and Socialists who had meant to stampede the meeting into radical action.

The moderates won two intense parliamentary contests through the wise foresight of Edward D. Nolan, San Francisco, and John Fitzpatrick, president of the Chicago Federation of Labor.

Chicago Shows War. They and their followers made it plain that in Chicago, one of the strongest centers of organized labor, rash and ill-advised action will not be tolerated.

What the radicals wanted was, first a general strike which would paralyze the whole country, until the liberation of Mooney could be forced; and at the same time, a demand for the liberation of their own kind—I. W. W., Bolsheviks, Socialists and others, who are serving terms for pro-German activity, and for strike violence. They call them "political industrial" prisoners.

The cooler heads made it plain that the convention will tolerate no such methods.

REDS NOW THREATEN SWITZERLAND GOV'T.

Demand Release of Some Red Prisoners or Threaten to Kill 30 Swiss.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Geneva, Jan. 15.—The Bolshevik government in Petrograd has telegraphed an ultimatum to the Swiss federal authorities, saying that unless thirty Bolsheviks, who were arrested and imprisoned in the fortress of Savatan, in the Canton of Valais, are released before Feb. 1, thirty Swiss citizens in Petrograd will be shot without trial.

The Bolshevik movement seems to be spreading in the Rhine towns and in north Switzerland, where Madame Balanova, a Russian who recently was expelled, has returned secretly with several million rubles for the carrying off of Bolshevik propaganda. The police are searching for her.

COPY OF ORDINANCE OF DIXON DRAWN 1853

Memento of Dixon of Early Days Found Among Dr. Everett's Papers.

An interesting memento of Dixon of 1853 has been placed in the City Clerk's office—a framed copy of the first ordinance passed in this city. The printed document, of which there is no record on any of the city's books, was found by Dr. Mark Everett of DeKalb in some of the papers belonging to his father, the late Dr. Orville Everett, and was sent by him to the city authorities and has been framed.

The ordinance, which was drawn and passed by the Town Trustees, was dated April 27, 1853 and shows the board to have been: John Dixon, president; A. L. Porte, L. Wood, P. M. Alexander and A. B. Judd, clerk.

BASKET BALL AT "Y" GYM FRIDAY

AS IT WAS IN THE BEGINNING

POLO YOUNG LADY IS INJURED COASTING

Miss Helen Zick, Daughter of Attorney and Mrs. Fred Zick, is Victim.

LEG IS FRACTURED

Polo, Jan. 14.—An accident which might easily have resulted fatally occurred on the big hill near the Barber barn, where a number of young people were coasting Saturday evening. Miss Helen Zick, daughter of Attorney and Mrs. Fred Zick was on a small sled with three other girls, and were following a large sled, which they overtook just as it was making the turn at the foot of the hill. The small sled struck it heavily and Miss Zick suffered two fractures of the left leg.

She was carried to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Davison nearby and her parents and Dr. Donaldson were summoned, and after making her as comfortable as possible they removed the young lady to her home, where the fractures were given proper attention. The young lady is known as one of the most vivacious of Polo's young people and her friends sympathize with her the more, knowing what the affliction means to her.

Added attractions, besides the scramble supper and the dancing, will be a great "Mr. E." show in the parlors immediately after the supper, and an address by Lt. Frank Hogan, who is but recently returned from France.

NO STOPPING YANKS

Describes Their Charge On Moonlit White Sands to Gun Nests.

Three days without water, while the Americans were pursuing the Austro-Hungarian troops north from the Italian border, because the boys were afraid the wells might have been poisoned by the retreating foe, was but one of the experiences "enjoyed" by Sgt. Sherwood Dixon, son of Attorney and Mrs. Henry S. Dixon, of this city.

Under date of Nov. 27, he wrote his parents from Fiume, Hungary, giving a most interesting account of what had been doing with the part of the American army to which he was attached—the part which fought on the Italian frontier. The Telegraph is privileged to give the young man's fine letter to its readers:

"I know that you have often wondered where I have been, and it looks as though the censorship has been relaxed, so I'm going to tell you the whole story, taking a chance on its going through.

On June 6 we went from Camp Merritt to Weehawken, crossed the Hudson on a ferry, and boarded the "Acquittania" at the Cunard docks. The business of loading took some time, for the ship carried considerable freight besides the 7,000 soldiers and the crew of 1,500, so it was Saturday morning, June 8th, when we sailed out of New York harbor, accompanied by several destroyers and aeroplanes. The planes took us out about two hours, but the destroyers stayed with us until dark. Our boat was too fast to travel in a convoy, so it always worked alone. It is 901 feet long, but we did 25 knots an hour the whole trip, even though we were constantly twisting and turning. The "Carpathia" which was docked next to us, and left a day or two later was caught by the subs, but we were never in danger, though one of the gunners claimed to have seen a periscope within 200 yards of us.

We were to be met by a convoy of British destroyers when we entered

SAMUEL ALLEN, G. A. R. VETERAN, IS CALLED

Passed Away at Home of His Daughter at 10:30 This Morning.

FUNERAL FRIDAY A. M.

Samuel Allen was born May 6, 1837, near Stoiston, Somerset county, Pa., and passed away at 10:30 o'clock this morning, aged 81 years, eight months and nine days.

In 1853 he came to Illinois, driving overland with the Mossholder and Kiser families. He watched the course of the war with intense interest and in August, 1862, threw aside all personal consideration to join the brave boys in blue at the front, his name being enrolled on the fifteenth of that month as a member of Co. A, 75th Illinois Inf., under General Thomas. He served until the close of the war when he was given an honorable discharge at Camp Harker, at Nashville, Tenn.

After the war he returned to South Dixon and in 1867 was united in marriage with Miss Eva Mossholder, who departed this life in 1895. To this union three children were born: Mrs. Cora Baker, Los Angeles, Cal., Louis Allen, Ottawa, Ill., and Mrs. Nellie M. Ortleson, with whom he had made his home for the past eighteen years. Nine grand children and two great-grand children also survive.

The funeral will be held Friday morning at 10 o'clock at his late home, 524 Ottawa ave., Rev. E. C. Lumsden officiating, and with burial at Emmanuel cemetery. The G. A. R. will furnish pall bearers and will have charge of the services at the grave. The G. A. R. circle will have the flag service at the house.

DIXON COUPLE ARE IN TOILS OF IOWA LAWS

Mr. and Mrs. George Wakeley Are Charged With Robbing Relatives.

SOUGHT FOR HERE

Chief of Police Van Bibber was this morning notified by the Davenport police department that George Wakeley and his wife, Gertrude, formerly of Dixon, who were wanted in that city for alleged larceny, had been apprehended at Champaign and were now under arrest in Davenport. It is charged by the Davenport officers that recently they went to the home of a distant relative in Davenport, ostensibly for a short visit, and that while the housewife was out getting groceries and meat to properly entertain them, they ransacked the house, taking jewelry and money.

They disappeared from Davenport immediately and the officers were of the opinion that they might have come to Dixon, and the local police were asked to investigate. It was learned that Wakeley had been in Dixon the day before the message was received here, but that he had left the same day.

NICE LANGUAGE IN SENATE BODY

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Washington, Jan. 15.—Senator Thomas of Colorado, testifying before the Senate judiciary committee today relative to German propaganda, declared that the statement made yesterday by Austin J. Smith that he had arranged with Count Von Bernstorff to pay for the support of the Pueblo, Col., Chieftain, was untrue. "This man Smith is an unsuccessful blackmailer, an unmitigated liar, and I have reason to believe he is a forger," declared Senator Thomas.

WILSON TO HAVE OWN ESTIMATE OF BILL OF DAMAGES

Picked American Army Officers Will Prepare Estimates of War Losses.

MAY EXCEED POWER

Many Believe German People Will Not Be Able to Pay for Restitutions.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Paris, Jan. 15.—President Wilson will have before him independent estimates of the damage suffered by Belgium and France in the war when the peace conference reaches the question of indemnities. A survey of the damage is planned by 200 officers of American army who have been chosen especially for this work.

Records Destroyed. Many difficulties will be encountered in estimating damages for in many of the devastated regions there is absolutely no record available on which to estimate what existed before the cities fell in ruins before the German guns and troops. The work of visualizing pre-war conditions, to fix proper physical valuations on property, may take many weeks, and probably months.

Beyond Huns' Powers. In the opinion of many who have studied the matter the actual damages when computed, may be so great that the entente nations may be more concerned with the ability of the German people to foot the bill than in the possibility of exacting further damages of punitive indemnities and war costs.

President Wilson will insist that the allies' demands be restricted to restitution, reparation and restoration, and shall not extend to financial punishment of the German people. SUPREME COUNCIL RESUMED MEET TODAY.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS LEASED WIRE

Paris, Jan. 15.—The supreme allied conference resumed its sessions at 10:30 o'clock this morning. Clemenceau and Pinchon were present as representatives of France; Wilson and Lansing for the United States; Lloyd George and Balfour for Great Britain; Foreign Minister Sonnino for Italy; Vice Count China and Baron Matsui for Japan.

WILSON FIRM IN REFUSING ITALY.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. London, Jan. 15.—Commenting on the interview between Premier Orlando of Italy and President Wilson last Friday, the Paris correspondent of The Daily Mail says the premier expressed surprise at Wilson's attitude.

Wilson was firm in his refusal to recognize Italian claims beyond Trent and Trieste, the correspondent wrote.

LORD COCIL SAYS MONROE DOCTRINE FITS.

By Associated Press Leased Wire. Paris, Jan. 15.—Lord Cecil, who last evening discussed with American journalists, his view of a league of nations, paid little attention to reference to limitation of armaments. When asked his opinion on that feature he said the league "will certainly provide for limitation and decrease of present armaments."

He said the league, when formed, would do away with treaties insofar as their tenets included compacts to provide for balance of power.

When asked his opinion on the Monroe doctrine and the league he asserted there could be no conflict between them.

TAKE NELSON TO PEN TOMORROW

Fred C. Nelson, who last week pleaded guilty to a charge of grand larceny, on which he was indicted for stealing Joseph Reaver's automobile, will be taken to the Joliet penitentiary tomorrow morning by Sheriff Schoenholtz to begin the indeterminate sentence imposed by Judge Farland.

Sheriff Schoenholtz has received no word from the authorities of the Lincoln state hospital regarding disposition of George Lighty, the escaped inmate from that institution, who was taken into custody at Nelson Monday afternoon, and accordingly the fellow is being kept at the county jail.

2,000 DEAD IN CITY OF PRZEMYSL RESULT OF UKRAINIAN ATTACKS

Conditions in City Bombarded by Ukrainians Said to Be Terrible.

KILLED IN POGROM

Attempt to Disarm Militia Organized by Jews Resulted in Killings.

Geneva, Jan. 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—Two thousand persons have been killed at Przemyśl, Galicia, by the Ukrainians, according to a dispatch to the Neue Freie Presse of Vienna.

The Ukrainians have been bombarding Przemyśl for several days past by land and by air, and conditions in the town are described as terrible.

The gas and electric plants have been destroyed and there is no light in the town. Water and food also are lacking.

Many Killed in Pogrom.
Warsaw, Jan. 13.—(By the Associated Press.)—A pogrom is reported to have taken place at Breditschew, popularly known as the Jewish capital of the Ukraine, the place deriving its title because of its all-Jewish population. The trouble is reported to have occurred as a result of an attempt by peasants to disarm militia which the Jews were organizing for their protection in all centers, which they anticipated would be necessary when the Moscow government breaks up.

Reports received here give the number of persons killed as several hundred, while other hundreds are declared to have been wounded.

It is considered here that the control of Petlura, the Ukrainian leader, has weakened, as otherwise he would not have permitted the pogrom, his policy previously having been to protect the Jews when possible.

HOW TO RUB OUT WRINKLES —OTHER BEAUTY SECRETS—

By Madame Marce

Most important to the average woman is how to get rid of those tell-tale signs of age—wrinkles and crow's feet.

Much has been written on the subject, but the only treatment worth while is the one that does the work.
Any woman can prepare a wrinkle cream in a few minutes that will certainly give Old Father Time an awful tussle. Women who have tried it pronounce it almost magical in results. It is very simple and easy to prepare. Get from any drug store about two ounces of opol for fifty cents, dissolve it gradually in half a pint of hot water. Then add a tablespoonful of glycerine. This will give you a wrinkle remover that cannot be excelled. Use freely night and morning, and you will soon notice results.

Walsh, the great authority on the hair, says we have much to thank bacteriology for in the care of the hair, as it is the little dandruff germ that eats away at the roots causing it to become lifeless, fall out and become thin and scraggly. Any woman with these hair troubles will do well to get from her druggist one ounce of beta-quinol for fifty cents.
Mix half a pint of water and half a pint of bay rum, add the beta-quinol, and you will have a tonic that will,
if used faithfully every night, correct any hair trouble.

The head should be thoroughly washed at least every two weeks to get rid of the excess oil, dirt and greasy accumulations. For a clean and inexpensive head wash there is nothing that can equal a teaspoonful of eggol dissolved in a cup of hot water. Twenty-five cents' worth of eggol will give you a dozen shampoos.

ASHTON YOUNG MAN IS CALLED

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Bode of Ashton, death at a hotel in Akron, O., of their mother have gone to Akron and it is believed the remains will be taken to Ashton for burial beside the body of an infant son who passed away a short time ago. The deceased was well known in the vicinity of Ashton and was a prominent trombone and violin player in that vicinity.

est ice cream and candy shops in this erally patronized. Light lunches

THREE DAYS WITH NO WATER CHASING ENEMY

the danger zone, but we missed them, and didn't meet them until the day before we landed. On the evening of the 14th we passed the spot where the Lusitania was sunk, just off the coast of Ireland. It was marked by four large buoys, of peculiar shape, and on the morning of the 15th we landed at Liverpool.

It was almost noon before we got ashore. Then we marched through the city accompanied by a British band and the usual crowd of admiring kids, to the Midlands R. R. station, where we were entrained. We had a fine ride, (second class) through Derby, Birmingham and several other big cities to Southampton. At that time the sun set at about 9:45 and it was twilight until eleven, so it was hardly dark when we detrained and marched to a big camp in the direction of Salisbury plain. There we stayed for about a day—Southampton is a beautiful place, but they certainly handed out some rotten grub at the rest camp there.

We marched back into the city, to the docks and boarded the channel boat, "Viper," a very fast boat, capable of doing 35 knots, but rather small for a whole battalion. We sailed out of the harbor that evening, past all kinds of raft, including several torpedoed ships, through the mine fields, past the beautiful Isle of Wight, and dodged subs most of the night. I got a couple of hours sleep on the floor and woke up the next morning in Le Havre. We climbed through the city, which is very hilly, and ended up at Rest Camp No. 1, on the top of the highest hill of them all. We spent several days there, and that is where I saw Bob Ovington, and staged my birthday. I think that part of the Rainbow division had been there, judging from what people said, but at that time I hadn't learned enough French to understand more than 1 per cent of what I heard.

From Le Havre we took our first ride in the "Chevaux 8, Hommes 40" cars that we were destined to become so familiar with. We rode about 24 hours, through a corner of Paris, (which we passed during the night, however), and quite a lot of interesting country, to Foulain. It was from the little town of Foulain that we had one of our hardest hikes. We left the train at 6:30 p. m. and marched until 3 a. m. in the rain, up hill all the way. We were soft after the long rest, we were carrying extra heavy packs and wearing our light weight russet shoes, not our hobnails. Every village that came into view we thought we were going to stop at, and we surely had a lot of disappointments, because the villages, while most of them were small, were pretty close together—just a mile or so apart. Finally we halted, and I just dimly remember trying to seat myself on a big stone. It was wet and slippery, and I was tired. I didn't hit it square, slipped off and flopped into a puddle where I fell sound asleep. While I was cracking, billets were found, and some one woke me, and I staggered into a nearby barn, where I spent the rest of the night.

The village was Donne-Marie, in the Department of Haute-Marne, 75 kilometers southeast of Paris, and 24 kilometers from Chaumont, the city I probably told you of having frequently visited was Nogent, a little place not far from Mondres.

We soon found out that we were going to Italy, and I didn't like the idea at first, for Italy seemed such an out of the way place, and there seemed to be so much going on in France, but of course my wishes did not amount to much. We were all set to go when the Germans opened up their drive between Soissons and Rheims, about the middle of July. Of course you know what happened then at Chateau-Thierry. We were held in reserve there for ten days, until the tide of the battle turned and it was evident that we would not be needed.

Then we marched to Fontain again, and boarded the train for Italy. We did not touch any of the big French cities on the trip, but we didn't miss much in northern Italy. We crossed the Alps, passing close to Mt. Blanc, and going through an endless chain of tunnels. At the entrance to one tunnel stood a French guard, and the last thing we saw before entering the tunnel was a little French village that surrounded the big hole. Then followed twenty minutes of darkness, and when we suddenly popped out into the blinding sunlight again, there was an Italian guard staring us in the face, and we were in an Italian city of some size. I never did learn the name of it.

Electric locomotives were attached to our train, and we made a fast trip from there on. I have told you a great deal about our reception, so I needn't dwell upon that.

We stopped at Torino about 6 p. m. and staged a parade. The people went wild over us, fed us, threw flowers, and all that. Then we went on, and arrived in Milano in the morning. We spent a couple of hours there, and though we did not leave the station, we got a pretty good view of the city, for the train passed quite close to some of the most celebrated buildings. We passed through Breseia, and stopped at Verona, took a branch road and backed up a few miles to the city of Villafranca. That was our first home in Italy. It was there that we were reviewed by the King of Italy, and first became acquainted with Jimmy Hare and the other photographers.

We stayed several week in Villafranca, making Sunday excursions to Verona, twelve miles away, and to other smaller places of interest. The first and second battalions were quartered in two nearby towns—Custoza and Somma Campagna, so to get the regiment together, we were all moved to a level plain just outside of Valeggio, a little town on the edge of the mountains, where we spent over a month in tents.

There we stayed under a period of training in modern warfare—advancing under barrages, bombing, using liquid fire, and in fact, practicing almost every form of assault that is open to the infantry.

It was rather dangerous work, I must admit, and our battalion suffered more casualties there than the whole regiment did during the advance from Treviso to Cormons. I have had some narrow escapes; once a shell fragment as large as my forearm struck less than the breadth of my hand from where I lay—had it struck a rock, or even fallen in a different position, your dashing boy would now be toying with a harp instead of a fountain pen. A trench mortar shell exploded within 30 feet of where I lay, and by its concussion set off three others among which it had fallen, killing seven and wounding forty, yet I wasn't touched. Advancing through thick brush, rifle and machine gun bullets have whistled all around me, yet I have never been touched. I saw our lieutenant-colonel's foot blown off, and our major's jugular vein cut, and dozens of my friends killed and wounded around. I have been very lucky. One time I saw a man's life saved by a plug of tobacco. A shell fragment was stopped by the old square of Cimax and the man was merely bruised.

About the middle of October we moved up to Treviso and there we really got into things. One battalion went into the trenches, one was in support, and one in reserve. There was lots of excitement there. Air battles, and artillery action all the time. We were raided by Austrian planes, seven times, but the British Archie guns were good protection, and no bombs were dropped on us or anywhere else where much damage could be done.

After several false starts, the big push finally opened, and, contrary to the original plans, we were not in the assaulting wave, but formed a unit of mobile reserves. We moved, from our position, just northeast of Treviso, to the Piave at Grave Island. The British had taken it, and thrown a pontoon bridge across the 33-mile per hour current. We crossed in comparative safety, and started to work up to the front lines. Everywhere there were dead, wounded, and prisoners, captured stores, damaged and ruined towns and all the evidence of war. We walked day and night, forcing our way to the front, marching and counter marching to blank the Jerries after we once got there. Our kitchens managed to stick with us for two days, but then we lost them. We ate our emergency rations and then lived on an occasional ear of corn, head of cabbage, or potato, that the retreating enemy had left. We could not tell whether the wells were poisoned or not, and we couldn't afford to take a chance. For three days I didn't drink a drop of water. Luckily it was fairly cool. If the weather had been hot we would have been in bad shape. Finally I decided that I had to drink so I laid in waiting near a well, and waited until I saw a woman come and drink from it. Then I can tell you that I filled up. When we made contact with the Jerries we were pretty well in advance of the other forces but the British managed finally to get some monkey meat up to us and with some nourishing food under our belts we put up quite a scrap. Our company formed the advance guard, and we drove through the open country, right on Fritzies' heels, almost at a run. The last town I remember was Valvasone, about three miles from an important bridge on the Tagliamento. The Tagly is 1500 yards across, but is nearly dry most of the time, and at this point there were six swift narrow channels in it. The Jerries got across on two railroad bridges and one foot bridge, which they fired and blew up as we approached, right on their heels, at dusk. Patrols from our company waded across while we established a position on the west bank, and found the Austrians in a very strong position behind a dike, which was lined with machine guns, etc. We kept them busy until five companies came up from behind us, deployed, fixed bayonets, and without a minute's rest went right over after them. It looked almost impossible to cross the white gravel in the moonlight, with all the fire concentrated on one spot, yet with no artillery support except for one gun which fired not over ten shots, the Yanks went over the top. When the machine guns opened up the Yanks went for them, instead of seeking cover, and this so surprised the Austrians that they all turned—except those who couldn't—and fled. Our objective was only the Austrian trenches, but some of the boys pushed on about five miles to Codroipo, and captured an immense supply of ammunition. After the assault, I took six men and explored the river bed, but found nothing alive. The next day I took fifty men across with food for the men in the advanced sector, and saw a lot of interesting things. The same day the armistice was granted, and we withdrew to Valvasone for a rest. That is, we were to have a rest, but the next morning we moved up to occupy the captured territory, and our first forced march was a terror. We marched from one morning until the following night, with just two hours rest. I carried nearly one hundred pounds on the trip, and it taxed my strength to the utmost. We marched for several days, and finally halted at the border for three days. Then we moved into Austria and took over a couple of buildings to sleep in, at Cormons.

That was the end of our hard work. We stayed there almost a week and rested up, then our battalion took a train for Fiume, one battalion left on foot for Treviso, and the other by motor truck for Venice, from there to go to Montenegro. Our sole purpose now is to keep peace in the family and see that everyone is treated properly. It is hard to tell how long we will be here, but it's a fine place, and it will not be a hardship to stay in Fiume all winter if we have to. I'll tell you about Fiume in my next letter. I believe this is the longest letter I have ever written in my life. Love to all. SHERWOOD.

"The Standardized Store"

A SPECIAL OFFERING CHARMING NEW SILK BLOUSES

Unusual, indeed, in many ways, is this offering of beautiful new blouses, unusual as to styles—styles that are decidedly new and were designed especially for us and other good stores in other cities, who are cooperating with us in this unique blouse service.

They are decidedly unusual as to fabrics and values.

Georgette crepes and crepe de chine are the materials out of which they are fashioned. Every model is cut on full, generous lines so as to insure perfect fitting.

This is a real value-giving event that again emphasizes the superiority of the blouses to be found here. At a time when sales of out-of-season merchandise are so rampant it's worthy of note that these models are all refreshingly new and that there's a pleasing diversity of styles as well as a complete range of sizes to choose from.

These blouses are in two groups and are priced at $3.95 and $5.95

This is the last shipment of these silk blouses due us on a contract placed last summer when the price of fabrics were much under present prices. It is unlikely that values, such as these, can be duplicated for some time to come—an excellent reason for providing now for your future requirements. The quantity is limited.

WINTER COATS WONDERFULLY LOW PRICED

Of course in many of the lots the sizes are broken, but any coat selected at these prices will be a rick reward in the saving. You'll be delighted with the service they'll give.

TRAIL OF A TRAITOR

I do not know how far we were from Robinson's when we took to bareback riding; but it made no difference; the horses knew the road, and possibly thought they were bound for the stables, for without being guided they swung into the driveway, nor did they ease their pace until they were well behind the house and close to the great stone barn, then the finest on the island. A mile beyond I could see the tall chimneys of the Apthorpe mansion.

I leaped from my horse and lifted down the girl, and then knew we had stopped none too soon for her, for her face was ashy white as she stretched out her arms to me, with a little wan smile forced to her lips, and had I not been there to catch her she would have gone to the ground. I then saw she was unconscious.

Even as I stood there holding her lifeless form in my arms I heard the clatter of many hoofs come plainly through the hiss of the falling rain, and then between the trees along the distant road I saw six dragoons flash past and go tearing up the highway. Behind them came a seventh rider, going as if his horse was too weary to keep with the rest. I uttered a "Thank God!" as I saw the little troop going on a fool's errand, they probably having been misled by the negro.

But the respite for us would not be long. I must risk the boat, if there was one, and risk it by daylight—unless Agnes was dead. My heart almost stopped as the possibility struck me, for I was not used to seeing fainting women. If she were dead what mattered what became of me, though even then I swore they would find the body of neither of us. I would find a boat somehow, and with her cross the river in the face of hell itself. And I would have but one regret beside that of my own loss: I had neglected to kill the villain who was at the bottom of my trouble. Twice we had encountered since his escape from Jersey, and he still lived. I wished there were to be a third time.

I laid the unconscious girl on the now soaking ground, and taking a short cut for the river, went down an almost precipitous incline. And I came upon a boat-house at the end of a long flight of steps leading from the high ground, and in it was a boat with oars and cushions, just as it had been left by the last user, probably one of the caretaker's family.

Liberty seemed close to me then, but it did not lift my spirit; I had something beside flight on my mind. But when I returned to where I had left the collapsed girl I saw her sitting up on the sodden earth, conscious, but very weak. I could have shouted then for joy.

"But I cannot go," she said wearily, when I told her a boat was at hand and the dragoons gone by. "I am cold to the bone. I am so—so tired! I—I would die."

"Never!" I said, trying to encourage her, but again feeling the awful clutch at my heart. She rolled her eyes up to mine and whispered faintly: "Go—go to the house. I haven't slept for three nights—I haven't had a mouthful since—since—"

I didn't catch the last, for her words trailed off into a moan, her head fell sideways on my shoulder, and she was off again.

So there lay the trouble! The girl lacked food and rest, and that, together with her awful strain, had been her undoing. Go to the house for food? I would have stormed a castle single-handed that she might have nourishment and stimulant. For now I saw she was in danger of death from sheer lack of nerve force. I eased her to the wet ground again, and whipping out my sword went straight and openly to the stone mansion.

It was a majestic building, with tall, fluted columns reaching above the second story, and on its top was a fine cupola; but there was no banner flying from the staff above it. And nature had taken a hand at beautifying the structure, for its entire rear was covered by a clambering vine that had overreached the roof and was twining around the chimneys or hanging in festoons from the leads, the leafy curtain showing the advancing season in bloodred splashes.

CHAPTER XVIII. The Last Encounter.

As I approached the place I saw a horse with military trappings standing by the back piazza steps, its bridle and rein thrown over the newest post. I wondered if it had been there all the time, or why I had not seen it arrive, but I was not greatly troubled about it or its rider. I was on edge then; one man was as nothing to me, and I would have fought the devil himself had he stood betwixt me and what I was after.

But though desperate enough for anything, I was not quite a fool, and so instead of going at once to the door, I sneaked up to the window beside it and looked in.

The door led not into a hall, but into an apartment, undoubtedly the caretaker's quarters, and though he was not present, a girl, probably his daughter, was. She was a buxom wench of nineteen or twenty, and she sat at a table with her elbows on it looking curiously and timidly at the man on the opposite side who was drinking from the bottle in front of him.

It took me a moment to recognize him; but that man was Lysander Melton. He was considerably the worse for the way he had been handled that day.

Both his eyes were streaming as if from a blow; he was wet, hatless, his hair was disordered, and around his throat, which I had twice gripped, was wound a handkerchief. The undiscovered portion of his face was ghastly white. Though he had been unarmed when I had fled from Cherry Hill, he now had a sword, probably the one belonging to the officer Agnes had wounded, and the weapon lay on the table before him.

And so my prayer was about to be answered. As I looked at him drinking his wine, his attitude being one of extreme exhaustion, I saw fairly well through the run of events. I was satisfied that he had quickly recovered after I had gone, and our line of flight was easily guessed at by the absence of the chariot. He had arrived at the barrier too late to catch us, but with an increased force had continued the pursuit. Undoubtedly Peter had unintentionally sent the party astray—all but Melton, who was exhausted and could no longer keep up, and so had stopped for rest and refreshment at the Robinson mansion, where he was undoubtedly known. I was now certain that he did not dream of the possibility of my near presence.

It was God's providence which had saved us thus far, and I felt that life would not now desert us; yet I was far from feeling charitable and forgiving as I marked the wily devil at the table. With a muttered curse I strode to the door, and seizing the bronze knocker, brought it down with a thunderous bang. There was little time lost after that.

I heard a scream from the young woman, and the next moment she threw open the door, shirking back as she saw an armed man. As if I owned the place I walked into the room. Wet through as I was, bedraggled and mud-spattered, I do not believe Melton knew me at once, especially as my back was against the weakening light; but when he saw me stride in with a drawn sword he jumped to his feet and grasped the weapon on the table.

And then he knew me, even before he drew his blade; aye, and it was plain that I was about the last person he expected to meet in that house. I marked his eyes spread in astonishment, then he ripped out a forcible oath and stood staring at me. He did not speak; but I did. Advancing to him, I said:

"Lysander Melton, this is our third meeting this day! Have you faith in odd numbers? Look you, sir, I am about to settle with you. Defend yourself, sir, for, by the Lord of Israel, I shall try to kill you, and I have no time to lose."

Not a word did he return, and, indeed, there could have been little for him to say. He knew he had got to fight for more than my mere capture; he was perfectly aware that he must fight for his life. And there were no other preliminaries besides my few words; the affair might have been arranged for hours before so quickly did we engage. The girl gave a piercing scream as our swords crossed, and with her hands over her ears she ran from the room.

I was aware that Melton knew nothing of my ability as a swordsman, but surely the stigma placed on his lack of skill by the man, Merwin, was justified. The fellow was an infant at fencing. I might have played with him all day without myself receiving a wound, but I had no time to waste, and I hated him with an intensity that was unholly. I would kill him quickly and rid the world of the devil.

But it was not for me to do it. Melton knew just enough of the art of fencing to be aware that he had no chance against me, and as I drove him backward and would presently have him against the wall where he could not escape, he took the only possible way to save his life; that is, he suddenly threw down his sword and ran from the room.

However, I would not let him get away in that fashion, and so I put after him, cursing him for a coward as I pulled open the door he had slammed after him, and which led into the hall of the great building. I was out in time to see him go bounding up the front stairs, fear having put wings to his heels.

Up I went after him, both of us meeting the wench, who flattened herself against the wall to let us pass, and who screamed again as she saw my face. At the top of the stairs he turned, and seeing me following, sword in hand, he, too, screamed, giving vent to a yell that could only come from the throat of a coward in fear of sudden death; then he tore up the second flight to the attic, I so close behind that by the time he was on the top step I was at the bottom.

I thought to have him then, there being no higher spot save the cupola, but, to my surprise, he made for the little flight of steps leading aloft, and as I reached the level of the attic he had got to the door at the foot of the boxed stairway and ran in, drawing the door close and holding down the fall of the latch so that I could not open it. He had escaped me for the moment, but I had him treed, though I could spend little time on him just then.

But whatever else happened Melton must not be allowed to become aggressive. As he had made a prisoner of himself, a prisoner he should remain, at least until Agnes and I had gone. For now my rage and exertion had cooled my blood somewhat, and as the way of escape appeared open, I was rather glad that I had not slain the man in a moment of passion. Moreover, I made him fast, and it was an easy matter. The attic contained plenty of ancient furniture, and I dragged piece after piece against the cupola door.

Then I went down-stairs and met the girl in the room she had run from, her round cheeks white with fear. She whimpered as she saw me. "Did—did you kill him?" she whispered in an awe-stricken voice.

"No, I don't kill cowards," I said. "Do you know Miss Agnes Barrow?"

Her face brightened. "Of course." "She is outside now. She has been persecuted by that villain. She is wet, faint, cold, and hungry. Give me something for her."

Heaven bless the wench! If she thought of Agnes as a political refugee she gave no sign of it, and she was all solicitude at once.

And I patrolled the house from front to rear, my ear trained for what might be happening in the cupola, my eye on the road from the north, watching for the returning horseman. Agnes had recovered sufficiently to walk, and I was to give the alarm the moment the troopers hove in sight. Then we were to go. I had already robbed the governor's blanket closet and had quite a pile of plunder to take to the boat. Agnes should suffer no more.

But not a sign of a dragoon did I see, nor a threatening sound did I hear. Finally, as the dusk deepened, I determined to go.

And go we did, I taking a bundle of blankets for protection from the rain, and also Melton's sword for a trophy; and the sword I have now. I supported the girl, who was still weak, and thus we went from Governor Robinson's house, not pausing until we had passed over the rear lawn and reached the head of the stairway leading to the river below. There the girl halted to rest, and at that moment, through the drip of the rain I caught the ruffle of hoofs and knew that we had escaped none too soon. "I think we may laugh at them now," I said, passing an arm around the girl's waist. She turned and looked back toward the great house we had left, and was about to make some answer, but instead, she gasped me by the arm and pointed.

"See there! See there!" she exclaimed.

I followed the direction of her extended finger, and then knew that my prisoner had escaped—or almost escaped; that is, he had got to the roof of the mansion through a window in the cupola, and it was now plain that he was going to attempt to descend to the ground by means of the vine. I could mark his every movement, his figure being clearly silhouetted against the gray sky. I do not know what he hoped to accomplish; I do not believe he suspected the nearness of the coming dragoons. I only know that, with a lack of hesitation speaking loudly of his determination, he deliberately swung himself from the coping, and grasping the vine, began to lower himself hand under hand. My mind was made up. I turned to the girl. "Stay here," I said. "I will give him a warm welcome when he reaches the ground. By Heaven! I'll take him with us as a prisoner and see him hanged, as he wished to see me! I have yet time enough!"

But I did not even take him prisoner again; for, hardly were the words out of my mouth when the end came. Suddenly I heard a breaking and tearing of twigs, and the crashing of heavier branches, and then a great section of the vine bent outward like a folding curtain, it being tipped by the weight of the now struggling villain who was still thirty-five feet from the ground. I heard the scream he gave; I saw him burble through the air; and then came the thud of his body as it hit the turf.

Agnes groaned aloud. I left her and ran to the fallen man, who lay face down on the grass, and when I turned him over I knew his neck had been broken by the way it sagged to his shoulder. He was stone dead.

I did not linger. I hurried back to Agnes, and together we went down the long flight, neither speaking. At the bottom the girl stopped and turned to me.

"Was—he he killed?" she asked, a frightened look in her tired eyes.

"Your troth with him is broken past mending," I said, and she knew what I meant. "And yet, I would have you in bonds again, my love—my own love."

I don't think she answered; I don't remember; but I kissed her on the mouth and held her in a close embrace, and she made no protest. And hand in hand we went to the boat.

A few minutes later the mist of the river infolded us, and an hour more found us standing on the Jersey shore. And then my real life began.

(THE END.)

A Fine Talker.

"I like the looks of this parrot," said the lady who had stepped into the bird store. "Is he a good talker?" The proprietor replied that the bird was an excellent talker, and it was evident the customer was favorably impressed.

"What is the price for him?" she asked. The man had noticed the rich apparel worn by his customer, and he judged that there was a chance to make a little "easy money" at the expense of one who would never miss it.

"Ten dollars," he said, with just the slightest possible hesitation.

"Five dollars, madam," instantly croaked the parrot.

The lady looked at the proprietor, who had turned red.

"He certainly is a fine talker," she said, "and he also seems to have good sense. I am willing to take him at his valuation. Do I get him for that?"

"You do," answered the man, sadly.

OBITUARY

JOSHUA D. HARLEMAN.

Joshua Davis Harleman was born in Northumberland, Pa., April 28, 1844, and died in Dixon, Ill., Jan. 7, 1914, aged 74 years, 3 months and 21 days. He had been in his usual good health until the Sunday before his death, when he was suddenly taken ill. He was taken to the home of his daughter, Mrs. Blanche Stevenson, and on Monday was hurried to the Dixon hospital, where an emergency operation was performed. He passed away on the operating table.

During his boyhood days he came from Pennsylvania to Ogle county with his parents, two sisters, Catherine and Sarah, and one brother, William. Another sister, Ellen, was born in Ogle county. In 1869 he was married to Maggie Eyster at Paynes Point, who passed away a few years later. Three daughters were born to them, Ida, Emma and Jessie, the first two having preceded him in death.

Mr. Harleman was married a second time to Harriet Catherine Jenkins in 1877 at Oregon, Ill. One daughter, Blanche, was born to this union, the mother passing away Oct. 20, 1906. For several years after his second marriage the family made their home at Stillman Valley and later at St. Charles, then in Polo. For seventeen years he was sexton of the Fairmount cemetery of Polo, where he served faithfully and well. He united with the Lutheran church by baptism in March, 1898, under the pastorate of Dr. Dysinger of Polo.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Jessie Cleveland of Grand Junction, Colo., and Mrs. Blanche Stevenson of Polo; one sister, Mrs. Ellen Green of Woodbine, Ia.; two grandchildren, Mrs. Edna Monk of Dell Rapids and Glenn Stevenson; three nieces, Gertrude Shoemaker of Nebraska, Dora Richardson of Kings and Hattie Spiker of California, and one nephew, Wesley Harleman of Hudson, Cal.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Recipe that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is messy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

"Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" is a delightful toilet requisite for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and
Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only do the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel ill and heavy when they arise, splitting headaches, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, an, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the hole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach trouble, rheumatism; others who have yellow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

COMPTON.

The funeral of Robert Gilmore was held at the home of his brother, Arlous Saturday afternoon. Death resulted from influenza.

Health and Happiness

Women of today seem to listen to every call of duty except the supreme one that tells them to guard their health. Home duties, church duties, war activities, and the hundred-and-one calls for charitable enterprises soon lead women to overdo. Nervousness, headaches, backaches and female troubles are the inevitable result.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I was very weak, always tired, my back ached, and I felt sickly most of the time. I went to a doctor and he said I had nervous indigestion, which, added to my weak condition, kept me worrying most of the time—and he said if I could not stop that, I could not get well. I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my husband wanted me to try it. I took it for a week and felt a little better. I kept it up for three months, and I feel fine and can eat anything now without distress or nervousness. Health and happiness? Yes, I have both now."—Mrs. J. WORTHINGTON, 2842 North Taylor Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The majority of women nowadays overdo, there are so many demands upon their time and strength; the result is invariably a weakened, run-down nervous condition with headaches, back-ache, irritability and depression—and soon more serious ailments develop. Avoid them by taking in time

THE WIFE

By JANE PHELPS

RUTH TELLS BRIAN SHE HAS RESIGNED HER POSITION.

Someway the feel of Brian's arm about her waist dissipated much of Ruth's foreboding. She snuggled close to him and in this way they reached the living room. But when she sat down opposite him, the beauty of the room upon which she had spent so much time and considerable of her money, appealed strongly to her. Would they have to give up this home and live in a less expensive apartment?

"Well, I am waiting," Brian lighted a cigarette, and blew circles through which he looked at her.

"I have resigned my position," she had not intended to make this bald statement. She had planned to lead up to it gradually. To tease him a little, perhaps.

"You have—what?"

"I told Mr. Mandel I would not work for him any longer."

"Who are you going to work for?"

"A man named Brian Hackett." She said she had not realized what she meant; but supposed she was leaving Mandel to take a position elsewhere. But as she made answer, she watched his face and was almost repaid for her self-denial when she saw first the look of surprise, then comprehension, then gladness, that rushed over his face in quick succession.

"You mean—"

"I mean, Lieutenant Hackett, that I am going to stay at home and mind you and my baby; keep the house and be a perfect little housewife. Not that I mean to be too humble, but I am going to let you earn the money from now on. I shall keep you busy, and myself, too, spending it." Her tone was light, but she had a tightening in her throat which threatened tears.

"Really, Ruth—do you mean it—at last? Why, girlie, I have dreamed of this in the trenches. Dreamed that some day you would be satisfied with me and the home I could give you. I will make it up to you some way—I will, Ruth! I swear it."

"I know you will, Brian," she said softly, surreptitiously wiping her eyes. "And dear, there is nothing to make up. I was sure I was doing right—now—I am not so sure. I was selfish. But Brian, we mustn't talk sadly. I told Mr. Mandel all about it. You don't mind dear, do you? I had to. It wasn't fair for me to leave him without. I told him the whole story. Just how I had almost ruined you in your profession because I took from you all incentive to work. And how, had the war not come along just when it did, I might have lost you—"

she saw him reddening, and knew he was thinking of Mollie King. "That you were getting discouraged," she hastened to say, and so dissipate any other impression, "and that you would soon have left me. Yes, I know you were unhappy, Brian, although I thought I was 'doing my best.' But it wasn't my best. My very 'bestest' best should have been to make you happy. But we'll play we are just married, Brian, and start all over again."

"You immoral creature. How old are you?"

The surgical dressings, which were in the making when the armistice was signed and which were held until further orders from headquarters, were recently presented to the Dixon hospital as the headquarters' ruling was made that each chapter could dispose of those on hand as it saw fit.

is that boy of ours?"

They both laughed heartily, perhaps a bit hysterically. But it relieved the tenseness of their feelings and made talking easier.

"I wish you would do just one thing for me, Brian."

"Name it! It shall be yours even to the half of my kingdom." They were now sitting hand in hand like two children.

"I want you to give up that measly little office in that old building, and take one I found for you."

"You found for me," he replied.

"Yes. I knew it would never do for you to have that office. The old one, I mean. Why Brian, you have served your country in a manner deserving of support from that country. But you have got to put yourself in a position, in the environment, to receive that support. Men who can afford to pay a lawyer a decent price for his work and his time, are not going to go to one who spends his time in such surroundings. They are going to figure that if his office is untidy, old and threadbare, his work will also be untidy and threadbare. And—"

"Can't help being a business woman, can you?"

"No—perhaps not. But so long as I use my business training to help and advise Lieutenant Hackett and no one else, why grumble?"

"I'm not grumbling, you dear little wife. I am so happy I could dance a horn-pipe if it wasn't for my game leg. When can we go to see that office you have selected, Mrs. Lawyer Hackett?"

"Today."

As she answered she remembered she had something more to tell him. But it would keep until another time.

Tomorrow—Brian Rents the Office Ruth Selected.

TEN KILLED, TANK OF MOLASSES EXPLODES

Buildings Wrecked in Catastrophe at Boston—Sailors to the Rescue.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Boston, Jan. 15.—At least ten persons were killed by the explosion of a storage tank containing 2,000,000 gallons of molasses in the yards of the Purdy Distilling Co. today. The explosion tore down two supporting columns of the Atlantic ave. elevated lines, demolished buildings, overturned an electric freight car and trucks and killed a dozen horses.

All of the dead were teamsters and employees in the city's street cleaning yards which adjoin the distilling company. The molasses poured out into the streets covering them to a depth of two or three inches and most of the dead were so thoroughly covered with molasses identification was difficult. Sailors from the U. S. S. Rockport at anchor at a nearby wharf were the first to assist in the rescue work, and they were quickly joined by navy surgeons and Red Cross workers.

BERLIN TERROR WEEK FINALLY AT AN END

Losses Said to Have Exceeded 200 Killed and Over Thousand Wounded.

POLICE ARE ARMED

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Copenhagen, Jan. 15.—The German cabinet is meeting today to discuss the new constitution and the proposal for a meeting of the National Assembly.

Berlin, Jan. 15.—Berlin's long week of Bolshevism is finally at an end. Here and there groups of Spartacists, mostly youths, continue to fire from house-tops and attempt during the nights to revive the reign of terror, but so far their attempts have been insignificant.

Dr. Liebknecht and several of his followers have been arrested and are now awaiting military trial.

The losses on both sides during the week are said to have been over 200 killed and 1,000 wounded, the great majority of whom were Bolsheviks.

The reinstatement and arming of the police has given the government another force, the members of which know the criminal world. It is reported by loyal troops that the Spartacus movement here was directed from Moscow.

MARTIAL LAW IN ARGENTINA

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Buenos Aires, Jan. 15.—Marshal law throughout the country will be effected today if the Senate passes a bill to that effect which was adopted by the Chamber of Deputies yesterday. The bill would put the military in charge of the country for a period of thirty days.

Five provinces have asked for troops and at every army post there was great activity today. At Rosario, a city northeast of here, the situation is very grave and no attempt is made to run cars at night except on one line.

PROMISES HOUSE WILL INVESTIGATE

He charged there had been "rotten frauds," intelligent mistakes and conscientious acts. He pledged an investigation under Republican control of the next House. "Why don't you cause an investigation now?" he asked. "Are you afraid of what you will find?"

GOVERNOR'S TRIBUTE TO AMERICAN COWS

Says Cow is Great Laboratory Which Produces Most Perfect Food.

CALLS FOR INCREASE

Springfield, Jan. 15.—"The cow is a most wonderful laboratory. She takes the grasses of the pasture, and the roughage of the field, and converts them into the most perfect food for man. In that food there is a mysterious something which scientists have found essential to the highest health of the human race, and which can be found nowhere else. Men have sought for centuries the fabled Fountain of Youth. The nearest approach to that fountain which has yet been discovered is the udder of the cow. Without her milk, children languish, the vigor of the adult declines, and the vitality of the human race runs low. Millions of these gentle, unobtrusive 'foster mothers' of man have become the victims of this war. The world faces a shortage of dairy products. Let us of Illinois help meet this shortage in every way we can."

The foregoing classic by Governor Frank O. Lowden is the opening paragraph of a pamphlet designed to improve dairying that has just been issued by the Illinois Department of Agriculture, through its Division of Dairy Extension, of which Lewis N. Wiggins is superintendent. The pamphlet is entitled "The Foster Mother of the World." It contains short quotations from well known authorities upon dairying. It shows the value to the world of the dairy cow.

"No greater catastrophe can happen to a people than the loss of its dairy herds, for the total loss of dairy produce means ultimate extinction of a people," said Herbert Hoover, food administrator of the United States, during the war, who has recently been appointed by the Allies to handle the food problem in Europe.

Some well prepared and carefully presented statistics which will not be found elsewhere appear in the pamphlet, the object of which is to develop dairying by the presentation of facts from recognized dairy authorities. The pamphlet begins with the awakening of the dairying industry and follows it through its development—the intelligent use of silage, the distribution of calves, the testing of cows and their conservation, the care of cream and milk. It closes with the following plea: "The world demands good dairy cattle. Raise them. The world demands milk, butters and cheese. Produce them."

January milk price, $3.76 per hundred pounds, for 3.5 butter fat. Increase or decrease of 4 cents per point for milk testing above or below that basis.

—Look at the little yellow tag on your paper. It tells the date to which your Telegraph is paid. If we do not hear from you the paper will be discontinued on expiration date.

URIC ACID IN MEAT CLOGS THE KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you—Drink more water.

If you must have your meat every day, eat it, but flush your kidneys with salts occasionally, says a noted authority who tells us that meat forms uric acid which almost paralyzes the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken, then you suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids, to cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine, so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

The Secret of Their Beauty

It is health, robust health, that is responsible for the Kentucky girl's good looks. If she gets sick, she proceeds to get well. Possessed of health, she knows that personal charm and attractiveness need not worry. They are hers. That is the secret.

The story of Mrs. Hattie Hamilton, of the respiratory system, stomach, ton, 317 Myrtle Avenue, Latonia, Kentucky, is typical. She says: "I have never in all my life, until recently, weighed over 102 pounds. Finally, I began to take Peruna. My weight now is 120. While I didn't really need it, I have started on the third bottle. Peruna has certainly done me a great deal of good and I recommend it to my friends. Several are taking it."

It is surprising the amount of dependence placed by women everywhere upon Dr. Hartman's World Famous Peruna. For forty-five years it has been a household remedy for coughs, colds, catarrh and all catarrhal inflammation whether

By Allied Council

LEAGUE IS UP FIRST

Paris, Jan. 14.—The four American armistice representatives left today for Treves, where Marshal Foch is presenting the new terms laid down yesterday by the supreme council of the peace congress to the German commission. The party consisted of Admiral William Shephard Benson, chief of operations of the United States navy; Norman H. Davis, representing the United States treasury; Edward N. Hurley, chairman of the American shipping board, and Louis P. Sheldon who will represent Herbert C. Hoover, the American food administrator.

Finds Obscure Ships.
A report presented to the council having charge of carrying out the naval terms of the armistice stated according to the morning newspapers, that the interallied commission which visited Kiel and Wilhelmshaven discovered submarines under construction in slips, which the enemy thought would be overlooked. The report adds that the Germans contended that they were entitled to retain underwater craft.

According to the report the discovery at Kiel and Wilhelmshaven led to the finding of other vessels and consequently the new terms of the armistice will require the surrender of all submarines already built and the destruction of those on the ways.

League Comes First.
The first question to come up before the actual peace conference on Saturday will be that of the proposed league of nations, and it was made known today that it had been planned for the conferees to devote twelve hours daily to this work if necessary, until it is on the way to completion.

There is some reason for believing that the first plans for the structure probably will be somewhat composite, representative of a consensus of opinion on the part of the American, British and French statesmen who have been discussing the subject. It will not purport to be a finished product, but is intended to serve as a starting point for development.

This plan of procedure is gratifying to the American envoys, President Wilson having contended the league question should come up first.

Mr. and Mrs. John Rinehart of Franklin Grove, were in Dixon Monday.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, sniffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath as night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed up with a cold or nasty catarrh.
